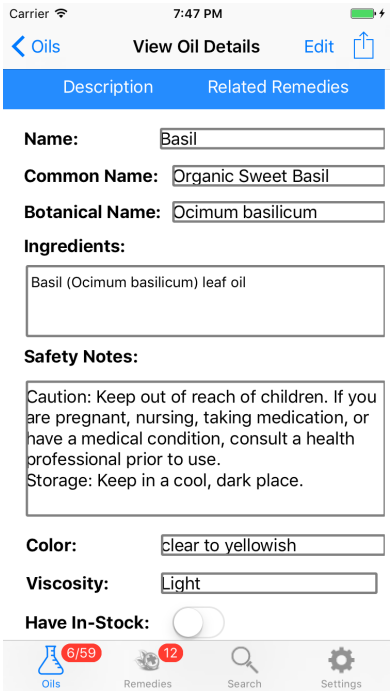
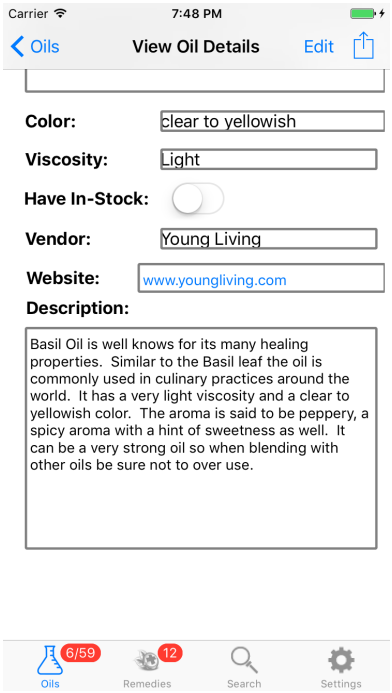
To whom it may concern,

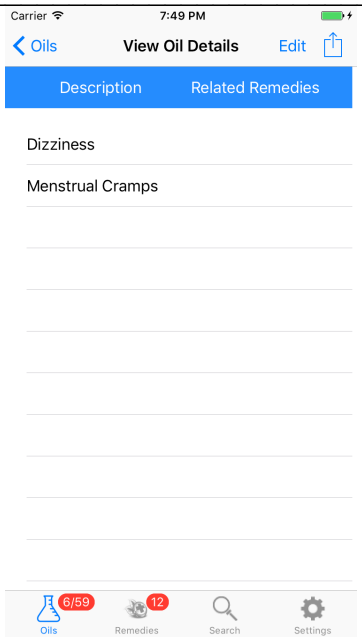
I was wondering if it would be ok to use some of your descriptions of the oils in my Application that I am creating? The App allows uses to put in details for their oils and if they have them in stock as well as remedies that the oil(s) can be used to help with. The Oil section allows to put the Vendor and a link to the website or to that product from that company and I wanted to get your permission to use a few of your oils plus description as a starting point for the user?

This can be between 2 and 5 oils for used for the details. I am not planning on pre populating the entire database with a lot of information that the use may or may not need since this application is geared to essential oils in general and not toward a specific brand. I do wish to provide some information so the user can see what they can use it for, but in the end, they have the option to clear out all the information in the database and start from a clean database if they want. However if the user is a pure Young Living user and wish to put all young living oils in their database, that is up to them. This is just to help them have their own electronic reference that they can use when they are away from their essential oil books or if they do not have access to the internet, this can store everything locally on their device.

With your permission to use a few samples from your website just a starter point for the user. In the Oil Details, it allows them to input a Vendor and the website, the website can be just to the company or a link directly to the website. For any of the Example oils that I use from your site, I will put in you as the vendor with a direct link to the product.







Along with being able to use oil descriptions, they can also see which of the remedies they have that oil listed in for a quick lookup. Your company and link the the site will be included in the description page.

I have been using essential oils for 14 years, and only recently come across Young Living products. And there have been a number of times that where I wanted to look up information on an oil that i have but couldn't because there was problems with internet connection. Even then I have some books on Essential oils and it takes a while to look up my ailment and then check to see which essential oils i have in stock that might be able to help. This is why I created this application. Which while in testing on my own person database, I have found this application very handy.

Initially I was going to put in generic information on the essential oils that i end up listing, but I wanted to give you guys a shot at little free advertisement by having your oils and website listed for some of the sample oils.

Please let me know.

Sincerely.
Joe Mireles